Premier league football players wages

Money is no lunge in the world of football and it couldn't be more genuine than the biggest club in England. More specifically, the money is not the opposite for Premier League teams who spend significant sums on star names to acquire silverware. In some cases, being england's highest salary player is not the same as being the best player all season. As some players and clubs on this list attter, money doesn't always buy trophies. Sports finance website Spotrac has compiled a number of footballers with the highest annual salary in the UK for the 2020-21 season. These numbers provide an opportunity for clubs to work out whether they are overpaying for a player's services. So, who is the highest paid footballer in the UK? The answer may surprise you according to the statistics. Nevertheless, these players are taking home a lot of cash in their pay packets, regardless of goals, assists or saves. Content1 David de Gea – Manchester United; £19,500,000 kevin de Bruyne per season – Manchester City; Season 3 Mesut Ozil – Arsenal; Season 4 Raheem Sterling - Manchester City; £15,600,000 Paul Pogba per season – Manchester United; Season 6 Anthony Martial - Manchester United; £13 million per season [ Sergio Agüero - Manchester City; £11,967,000 per season Mohamed Salah – Liverpool; £10,400,000 per season Marcus Rashford – Manchester United; £10,400,000 Harry Kane per season – Tottenham Hotspur; £10,400,000 per season - Tottenham Hotspur; £10.4 million per season Alexandre Lacazette – Arsenal; £9,467,273 david de Gea per season - Manchester United; £19.5 per season £19.5 million per season at Old Trafford is England's highest-paid footballer; De Gea has a six-year contract at Manchester United. , will pay a whopping total of £177m by the end of the contract in 2024. The shot-stopper pulls in a weekly salary of £375,000, more than any other play in Premier League history. De Gea's 2019-20 game did not back up the huge sums Manchester United pay him. The Spaniard was particularly criticised for making the mistake of allowing two goals against Chelsea in the FA Cup semi-final. De Gea's contract is difficult to move on, but Manchester United have a promising book on young goalkeeper Dean Henderson. Henderson was outstanding on loan at Sheffield United last term. De Gea has made 13 clean sheets and 96 saves in recent campaigns. Kevin De Bruyne – Manchester City; The £18,200,000-per-seasonKevin De Bruyne once again showed why he is paid so much during the 2019-20 season. The Belgian attacking midfielder was at the heart of everything Manchester City did in the final third game. He has scored 13 goals in 35 league games. But De Bruyne's goal doesn't make him very special. De Bruyne has created 33 big chances with 20-a-side in the Premier League. Tthe His contract at Etihad Stadium runs until the 2022-23 season. He make £350,000 per week. De Bruyne has done almost everything with Manchester City, winning european trophies. He was finally fit for a full league campaign. If he can continue to avoid injury, a piece of European silverware could finally end up in manchester's blue half. Mesut Ozil – Arsenal; When £18,200,000-per-season Mesut Ozil signed a three-year contract extension to stay at Arsenal in 2018, it was declared a coup for the club. The new deal increased weekly wages to £350,000 per week. Since signing a contract extension, Arsenal have signed and sacked manager Unai Emery, who Ozil failed to win. Mikel Arteta, the current Arsenal manager, appears determined not to play Ozil.Ozil and has spent a lot of time getting a big salary while not playing football. The 31-year-old scored just 18 goals for Arsenal in the 2019-20 season, scoring two assists. Ozil's big contract is now an albatross around the club's neck. Unfortunately for legendary Arsenal manager Arsene Wenger, re-signing Ozil on a big deal was one of his last actions at the club. The manager's record, which has since weighed in on the catcher, is bluish-tinged. Raheem Sterling – Manchester City; At £15.6 million per season, Manchester City were not afraid to pay their players large amounts of money. That's one of the reasons the club was under investigation with UEFA over financial fair play. Forward Raheem Sterling, who signed from Liverpool in 2015 for £15.6m per season, is named England's third highest salary player. Sterling is under contract at Manchester City until 2023. Over the course of his current deal, he earns £300,000 per week. If he can continue the form he showed in 2019-20, his salary could rise. Sterling scored 11 goals with his right foot, six with his left foot and three with his head in 33 Premier League games last season. Perhaps the only disappointing part of Sterling's performance was his lack of assists. The England international has just one assist. Paul Pogba – Manchester United; At £15,080,000 per season, Manchester United were tasked with re-signing midfielder Paul Pogba in 2016. It is very safe to say that there is no overestimation, even if it has not been in line with the hype or wages paid since Pogba's return. The midfielder helped them win the Europa League and EFL Cup in 2017 but spent a lot of time at Old Trafford injured. Pogba scored a double-digit goal only once. Most supporters expected him to leave the club with Real Madrid, and Pogba's weekly salary is believed to be interested in taking £290,000 out of Manchester United's hands. The Red Devils have not succumbed to Pogba's previous transfer wishes and after contracting midfielder Bruno Fernandes, the Frenchman looks to have made a u-turn.The midfielder has only played in 16 Premier League games in 2019-20 due to injury. Pogba scored one goal as he added a three-assist. His current contract 2021. Anthony Martial – Manchester United; Three of England's highest-paid footballers earn £13 million per season at Manchester United. In terms of trophies, the ground's result is not the same as the amount paid to these players, but there is hope that the club is on an upward trajectory under manager Ole Gunnar Solskjaer.Anthony Martial originally signed for the club from Monaco during Louis van Gaal's short and unsuccessful time. Martial, who signed for £54m in 2015, has been named a player for manchester United's future. Van Gaal could not have been more accurate. Martial appeared at the club as a central striker in 2019-20. He scored a career-high 17 goals. At just 24, Martial earns £250,000 a week. Martial is under contract until 2024 and Manchester United have one more year to sign. If he stays healthy, martial arts should do better for the Red Devils. Sergio Agüero – Manchester City; At £11,967,000 per season, Sergio Agüero is the greatest striker in Manchester City's history. Agüero, who signed for Atletico Madrid in 2011, has scored 254 goals in 370 games in all competitions for Manchester City. While Manchester City are unlikely to offer another contract extension when Agüero's current contract expires in 2021, it is already difficult for manager Pep Guardiola to change to Gabriel Jesus' new Agüero. Like former Manchester City centre-back Vincent Kompany, Agüero is virtually irreplaceable. Agüero is the best scoring player in the history of foreign players in Premier League history. He also holds the record for the most career Premier League hasots with 12. His £230,135 per week is well below some of the other players on this list, which is shocking due to the production Agüero has delivered to Manchester City over the years. Mohamed Salah – Liverpool; The £10,400,000-per-season reverpool won champions league and Premier League wins in 2018-19 and 2019-20 respectively. Even more remarkable for their achievements is the fact that only one of the top 12 highest-salary footballers on the England list. Mohamed Salah is Liverpool's highest annual star at £200,000 a week. Salah deserves his salary and his salary deserves a rise thanks to his continued goal-scoring production. Signed for £37.8m from Rome, Salah is now easily worth three times the price Liverpool paid for him. In the 2019-20 Liverpool Premier League championship season, Salah scored 19 goals in 34 games with 10 assists. Salah was a goal-scoring phenomenon for Liverpool, who won the Premier League Golden Boot award in 2017-18 and 2018-19. The winger is proof that clubs don't have to pay big wages to make the best players available. Liverpool's scouting department should be commended for what they did to uncover the jewel that is the King of Egypt. Marcus Rashford - Manchester United; Marcus Rashford at Manchester United for £10,400,000 per season Most of the boys in the Great Manchester area dream of growing up. Rashford grew up in the Manchester suburb of Wythenshawe and signed with the club's academy in 2005. Rashford, who spent 10 years at Manchester United's academy, was called up to the first team as a teenager in 2015. He scored eight goals in 18 appearances and immediately made his name as a rising star at the club. Rashford earns £200,000 a week for the club at the age of 22. He scored 17 Premier League goals in 2019-20, scoring eight assists in 31 games. After Rashford's play returned from trouble despite suffering a back injury midway through the season, he picked up to the right where he left off. The Manchester United forward's contract expires in 2023 and the club has one year to go. However, it is unlikely that Rashford's contract will expire. Manchester United are likely to re-sign him and pay him closer to the three highest-paid players at the club: De Gea, Pogba and Martial. Harry Kane – Tottenham Hotspur; The £10,400,000-per-season Hari Kane will transfer to another Premier League club due to Tottenham Hotspur's limited salary structure. Kane is Tottenham Hotspur's joint highest salary player, earning £200,000 per week. Kane signed a contract through the 2023-24 season when he turns 30. He is the heart and soul of Tottenham Hotspur, who showed in the second half of the Premier League season that the club failed to start in sixth place. Kane led Tottenham Hotspur to the 2019 Champions League final. He did not play in the quarterfinals and semifinals because of an ankle ligament injury, but Kane reached the final. There have also been claims that Kane will leave Spurs for a higher-paid contract at a club that could win the Premier League title, but he seems willing to play for the team he supported as a child. Tingay Ndombele – Tottenham Hotspur; In the summer of 2019, Tottenham Hotspur paid £55m to Lyon in France for midfielder Tingay Ndombele. The fee was a club record and the fee, which many supporters regret, has ever been paid. Odombele started well under former Spurs manager Mauricio Pochettino. His performances soon waned, and with the appearance of manager Jose Mourinho, Ndombele's play continued to decline. He has played in just 29 games in all competitions, scoring two runs and assisting four goals. Only three times in the league has Ndombele played 90 minutes. Murino is regularly called Ndombele for his poor play and lack of stamina. He missed four league games through injury. The midfielder, who earns £200,000 a week, has not played in Spurs' recent four league games. Mourinho did not even select him as the team's bench for the final three games. Alexandre Lacazette – Arsenal; £9,467,273 per season Arsenal striker Alexandre Emirates earns more than £182,000 per week. It is a far cry from the salary earned by team-mate Mesut Ozil, especially considering Lacazette is playing more often and scoring more goals. The Frenchman, like Lacazette, is paid slightly more than pierre-Emerick Aubameyang, who is nearing the end of his contract. Giving Aubameyang a new contract to be named on England's highest salaryed football roster, it is likely the Gunners will part with Lacazette before his contract expires. N'Golo Kante and Kepa Arizavalaga are arriving shortly after Lacazette. Summary of the best paid players in the EPL in 2020:David de Gea – Manchester United; £19,500,000 Kelvin de Bruyne per season - Manchester City; £18,200,000 Mesut Ozil per season – Arsenal; £18,200,000rahim sterling per season – Manchester City; £15,600,000 Paul Pogba per season – Manchester United; £15,080,000 per season for Anthony Martial – Manchester United; £13,000,000 per season Sergio Agüero – Manchester City; £11,967,000 Mohamed Salah per season – Liverpool; £10,400,000 Marcus Rashford per season – Manchester United; £10,400,000 Harry Kane per season – Tottenham Hotspur; £10.4 million per season Tsingay Ndombele – Tottenham Hotspur; £10.4 million Alexandre Lacazette per season – Arsenal; £9,467,273 per season
